Finding the Road to Be Happy

Growing up, it can be hard to imagine doing something different. Our parents give us goals, we work hard, and before long we're on the road to be successful. But does that road always lead to be happy?

In my case it did not. I studied law in college and got a job from a big firm right out of school. At 26, I had my own office, and it seemed my future was set in stone. But something about it didn't feel right. I couldn't stop thinking about how my best years were being wasted when I sat there. Practicing law just wasn't for me.

So I did what most wouldn't dare - I walked away from my job, sold my apartment, and started traveling. I had always wanted to see the world, and this was my big chance. I started writing a blog about my trips through Africa, Asia, and South America. Now I make a living by teaching and writing.

I might not be rich, but I'm successful over my wildest dreams.
