People around the world have different ways to show their respect for their dead family members.

In Mexico, people celebrate the Day of the Dead from October 31 to November 2. During this time, families clean the graves and put candles, flowers, drinks, and food on the graves. Then they remember the dead by sharing stories of their lives. For the children in Mexico, the Day of the Dead is a happy holiday. They celebrate it by dancing and eating candy in the shape of a skull. It is a way for children to learn the circle of life and not to be scared of death.

In Indonesia, the Torajan people bring the dead back home every one to three years. Families get together to clean the body, brush the hair, and put fresh clothes on the body. After that, they take the dead out for a "walk." To the Torajan people, death is not an end. They continue to take care of their loved ones for many years even after they die.

People around the world hold different celebrations for the dead. They all try to do the same thing: To remember the dead and show their love to the loved ones.

Beth's Last Day in London

Last Monday was the last day of Beth's trip in London. Her flight was in the afternoon, so she went shopping for gifts at a department store in the morning.

The department store was big and beautiful. After Beth bought the gifts, she went to the bookstore. She walked around, and a book caught her eye. She decided to read it to kill time. Before she knew it, it was past the time for her to leave for the airport. She got in a taxi, and things started to go wrong after that. When Beth wanted to check her flight on her phone, she couldn't find it. "Oh, no! I left my bag in the store!" she said to herself. Luckily, her bag was still at the bookstore when she went back. Then, Beth hurried to the airport. She was so nervous, and she kept checking the time. Half an hour later, Beth finally got there. She was not late. It was the scariest but also the luckiest day of her life.
